J:

I'm not sure if this is relevant to you and the AWCA, but I came across the following reference to changes to the official name of a river in Alaska by the U.S. Board on Geographic Names in the June issue of the SCREE (by the Mountaineering Club of Alaska). I'm going to guess that you are already on the notification list for such changes, but thought I'd ask and pass this along just in case.

"At the same April 30 meeting, the U.S. BGN also voted to change the name of the Black River to the Draanjik River. This 160-mile-long river flows north-northwest and west to the Yukon Flats National Wildlife Refuge and enters the Black River Slough 16 miles northeast of Fort Yukon, thus draining the majority of the Porcupine Plateau. The town of Chalkyitsik is on the left (south) bank of the river. The revised name is of Gwich'in origin and translates to "caches along the river."
