

Armstrong Lakes are now officially called (listed on maps) Betty and Jetty Lakes.

7/14/87

Upper Port Armstrong Lake

107-10

7/14/47

Upper Port Armstrong Lake, at the south end of Baranof Island, was stocked with 50 rainbow trout from Lake Sashin in 1938. Fishing conditions at both ends of this lake were examined by Harry Sperling and the writer on June 29, 1947. No fish were observed at the upper end, although it appeared to be a good place for fish. Several rainbow 6 and 7 inches long were caught at the foot of the rapids below the lake. These drain into Lower Port Armstrong Lake, which is only a few feet less elevation than the upper lake, but is not as large.

It is reported that there are five to seven pound rainbow trout in both lakes. Some fishing is done on the lakes by employees at the Port Armstrong reduction plant. There is a boat on the lower lake.