

The Santa's Reindeer page has moved:

<http://www.adfg.alaska.gov/index.cfm?adfg=santasreindeer.main>

The screenshot shows the Alaska Department of Fish and Game website. At the top, there is a navigation bar with links for myAlaska, My Government, Resident, Business in Alaska, Visiting Alaska, and State Employees. Below this is the department's logo and name, along with a search bar. The main navigation menu includes Home, Fishing, Hunting, Viewing, Education, Species, Lands & Waters, and Regulations. A secondary menu lists various topics like Animals, Nonnative, Special Status, etc.

The main content area is titled "Species" and features a sidebar with a "Species Home" section and a list of animal categories. The central focus is the "Santa's Reindeer" species profile for R.t. saintnicolas magicalus. This profile includes a "Happy Holidays from Alaska Fish and Game" banner, a "Jump to species" dropdown menu, and a "Printer friendly" link. Below these are tabs for "Description", "Research", "Get Involved", and "More Resources".

The "Description" tab is active, showing a photograph of a reindeer with a red nose. A caption reads: "©ADF&G The only known photo of Rudolph, taken while he was vacationing in northern Alaska." To the right of the photo is a circular map titled "Santa's Reindeer Range" showing the distribution of various subspecies. Below the map is a "Did You Know?" box stating: "Santa's reindeer are unusually fond of carrot snacks."

At the bottom of the page, there are icons for "Listen" and "Sign", and a secondary set of tabs for "Description", "Life History", "Range and Habitat", "Status, Trends, and Threats", and "Fast Facts". The "General Description" section begins with the text: "Santa's reindeer (R.t. saintnicolas magicalus) look very similar to common reindeer or caribou, but have many characteristics that distinguish them from the seven other common subspecies. In Europe, caribou are called reindeer, but in Alaska and Canada only the semi-domesticated form is called reindeer. All caribou and reindeer throughout the world are considered to be the same species, and, including Santa's reindeer (R.t. saintnicolas magicalus), there are 8 subspecies: barren-ground (Rangifer tarandus granti), Svalbard (R.t. platyrhynchus), European (R.t. tarandus), Finnish forest reindeer (R.t. fennicus), Greenland (R.t. groenlandicus), woodland (R.t. caribou) and Peary (R.t. pearyi). Alaska has mostly the barren-ground subspecies and one small herd of woodland caribou. Canada has three subspecies, the Peary, woodland and barren-ground."