Re: Draft 2012 Integrated Report Comments

To whom it may concern,

The State of Alaska's fish and wildlife resources are vital to the citizens of this state, and important to our entire nation. Clean waters are essential to the sustainability of these resources, and in providing economic and recreational benefits to all.

The Clean Water Act mandates that each state develop a program to monitor and report on the quality of its surface and groundwaters, and list any water bodies that do not meet water quality standards.

Unfortunately, the DEC 2012 Draft Integrated Report omits two of this State's greatly impaired water bodies, the Kenai River for turbidity and the Little Susitna River for hydrocarbons and turbidity.

The Kenai River is world renowned for providing salmon resources to the commercial, sport, personal use, and subsistence fisheries. This river provides the largest run of wild salmon to the Cook Inlet region of Alaska. According to the peer-reviewed technical report prepared by the Kenai Watershed Forum, the Kenai River has been shown to violate the State of Alaska Water Quality Standards for turbidity for multiple years.

The Little Susitna River is also very important for providing salmon resources to commercial and sport fisheries. A peer reviewed report conducted by The Aquatic Restoration and Research Institute concluded that both hydrocarbon and turbidity levels on the Little Susitna River have exceeded Alaska Water Quality standards for multiple years.

The negative effects of both turbidity and hydrocarbons on fish, wildlife, drinking water, and recreation are well documented and undeniable. These negative effects are especially apparent on juvenile Chinook and Coho salmonids due to their extended residence in these waters. There is no doubt that designated uses of these rivers are being impaired.

Therefore, the undersigned citizens request the DEC list the Kenai River and the Little Susitna as Category 5 impaired status in the final Integrated Report to the Environmental Protection Agency.

Respectfully Submitted,

450 Concerned Citizens

I am requesting that The Alaska Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) list the Koyuk River and the Little Sable as Category 3 impaired status in the final Integrated Report to the Environmental Protection Agency.
