
I am opposed to change the season from October to may

1 quality issues with warmer weather and soft meat shrimp .

2. Live span and egg bearing season differences is irrelevant in 4 months difference.

3 using egg bearing as disadvantage for market place is not true . Bigger larger and heavier shrimp always command top price .

4 comparison between Canadian fishery and alaska is not Apple to Apple ... Canadian harvest area is over 500 miles of waterways compared to 250 miles .. and is prime habitat for shrimp . What they do is not applicable to alaska.

5 having season after Canadian season has offered better price for export shrimp as Japan knows what inventory is and has raised prices to shore up supplies of shrimp sizes not present in Canadian harvest

6 winter season offers better quality product .

Life time resident of alaska and have shrimped fished commercially for 35 yrs and subsistence Shrimp as well year round .

Again I am opposed to changing the season.
