Comments: If there is no scientific data to support the decision, than why go by what a anti- hunter has to say. The fish & game department of Alaska should be ashamed of it's actions....People's livelyhood and way of life are at stake here. Do the right thing...review your data and take what the anti's have for data with a grain of salt.

Comments: As a non-resident who has hunted (and will again this year, being 2009) Alaska, I am writing to you extremely concerned. I have been unable to find any research noted (or otherwise referenced) which would lead me to believe that lowering the sea duck limit in this area is anything short of caving to a few in order to silence the phone calls.

I consider myself a conservationist of the game first and foremost, and have no problem following (and helping police) game laws which take the protection of a species at risk. Conversely, I am also a hunter, and urge the department to strongly consider returning the limits to the former given the lack of hard, scientific data to support such a move as this.

Sincerely, Justin Harrison

Comments: I first hunted the Kachemak Bay area in 1981 and again in 1983 and 1985. I fail to understand how what little sport hunting done ther can affect the Sea Ducks. I never saw another hunter and from the locals I spoke with their intrest was in Mallards and just a few even duck hunted. I know the McBride family well and they were hunters but conservationist as well. I firmly believe you're taking away a resource from the outfitters up there in this troubled economic time.

Comments: I believe that you need scientific data to support any issue, regardless of which side you take.

Without due process, and the PROPER research anyone can come up with "findings" and call them facts. It is a scary place when we rely on those who go off of myths and beliefs and not facts.

Ladies and gentlemen hunting and the tradition of waterfowling is rich with in my native tribe as it is with in your native tribes there.

I never waste or over shoot, I never take from mother earth more than she will give me. I feel that your rules enacted where done in haste and without proper research.

A true waterfowler, which I am, will give back 10 fold in which he takes. You will be limiting people like me from even coming to your area.

THIS is the true reason, the people that pushed this regulation do not believe in hunting THAT is the bottom line.

If you cannot see that then I feel very sorry for all involved. This is something that Gov. Palin will surely be receiving a letter about and should be concerned about. If she had any part in this regulation or putting the people in place that allowed it then I have will be questioning her as well in an informative letter to all that will listen.

PLEASE rethink your stance on this issue and take the time to educate yourselves on not only the TRUE reason this regulation was started but also understand the proper group behind it and their true intention of making it impossible for hunters to hunt.

Thank you for your time, patience and interest in my thoughts.

I guide for waterfowl in AK., N.Y. and R.I., and hope this never happens in the areas I hunt/guide.

It makes me wonder about the future of waterfowl guiding in AK.

I was planning on a future there waterfowl guiding, but now I'm wondering.

Comments: If there is no scientific evidence which supports the prior limits are having a negative impact on the numbers of sea ducks in the area, there is no reason to drastically reduce the bag limit as such. Year after year, studies are done to set the bag limits based on summer surveys as well as the prior years harvest. If it has been at 10 birds and the population isn't changing, there is no reason to change the limit.
