About the Unit maps on the following pages:

This Game Management Units map of Alaska and the individual unit maps found throughout the following section on seasons and bag limits are included to help you determine the area in which a regulation applies. These maps are not intended to reflect exact unit or restricted area boundaries. For exact boundaries, please refer to the written description at the beginning of each unit, and consult a large-scale topographical map of the area. Not all roads, streams, and geographical features are illustrated because of the small scale. Hunters are advised that additional restrictions may be imposed by the land owner. See page 2 for phone numbers of ADF&G offices in the communities noted on these maps.

HOW TO READ THE UNIT PAGES CORRECTLY

Game Management Unit. See statewide map on page 37.

This column depicts if a hunt is open to Alaska residents (R), nonresidents (N) or both (B).

The lilac column describes the unit or the portion of the unit where the hunt occurs.

This section describes the bag limit (listed in red) and special restrictions, such as spike-fork or antler restrictions.

An "OR" symbol between a list of hunts, as shown here, informs you that while you may apply for more than one of these hunts, you may only take one bag limit or the other, not both.

Additionally, Registration permits have specific pickup locations and dates they are available, as shown here.

Hunt types are also noted at the bottom of each unit page.
