I agree with the city response.

Personal use fishing with a dip net out of a boat does not make dip netting trawling. Mr. Vaneks loose and inaccurate characterization of dip netters in boats being trawlers is a ridiculous attempt to try and remove Alaskan families from personal use salmon fisheries used to feed our Alaskan families with this whole food Alaskan resource SALMON.

Anchoring boats in the Kenai River during tidal influx on the moving river full of dip netting families is another attempt to end personal use fishing by Alaskan residents (families) or create a dangerous boating P/U fishing environment for licensed and permitted Alaskan families.

Using a landing net for dip netting is not practical and is not efficient for catching salmon to feed Alaskan residents/ families.

The William Ames Bridge is a natural safe pull-out in a very congested mixed use area. Expanding that area by 300 yards would make it safer for Alaskan boating/ PU fishing families

~~Proposals~~ #s 196, 197, 198 is an attempt to close personal use dip netting fisheries to Alaskan residents/families -
